

Cell phone use on airplanes would increase the likelihood of passenger disputes with their neighbor. Passangers are already being forced to share their individual space; the amount of space they need to feel safe. Studies of cell phone usage have proved that users are louder and less concerned about those who are near. It is a sort of arrogance that would lead to physical confrontations in the confines of an airliner.